TURNER CLASSIC MOVIES BRITISH FILM GUIDE

TURNER CLASSIC MOVIES BRITISH FILM GUIDES

The Tauris British Film Guides series has since its launch in 2003 contributed to the revaluation of British cinema by going deep into key British films from the past hundred years. To carry the project forward, I.B.Tauris has now entered an exciting and innovative partnership with TCM (Turner Classic Movies), the premier movie channel dedicated to keeping the classic movies alive for fans old and new. With a striking new identity, the series will continue to provide what the Guardian has called a 'valuable resource of critical work on the UK's neglected film history'.

The series will continue to draw on all genres and all eras, building over time into a wide-ranging library of informed, in-depth film guides, demonstrating the variety, creativity, humanity, poetry and mythic power of the best of British cinema in volumes designed to be accessible to film enthusiasts, scholars and students alike.

TCM is the definitive classic movie channel available on cable, satellite and digital terrestrial TV <www.tcmonline.co.uk>

Acknowledgements

My interest in Black Narcissus began when I was researching the reception of British films in the USA. The Margaret Herrick Library of the Academy Foundation, Los Angeles, was an essential source for material on the censorship of British films, and I thank archivist Barbara Hall for alerting me to the Legion of Decency material that proved to be so rich and fascinating. Sue Simkin accompanied me on that trip and shared with me the delights of archival research far away from home; I thank her for all the support she has given me throughout this project. I would also like to acknowledge the Popular European Cinema conference on 'The Spectacular', held at the University of Warwick in March 2000, for providing me with the opportunity to present my first conference paper on Black Narcissus, as well as other institutions that have invited me to speak about the film: Bath Spa University, the Institute of Historical Research, London (the Issues in Film History series), the University of the West of England, the University of Bristol Department of Drama: Theatre, Film, Television and the Colonialism Research Group conference at Bristol, 2004. Jeffrey Richards and Philippa Brewster were enthusiastic about the idea of publishing Black Narcissus in the British Film Guide series, and I thank them very much for providing me with the opportunity to bring my material together. I have loved working on a single film for a single book.

Several people were very helpful in assisting me to locate material as well as sharing their ideas with me: Priya Jaikumar, Duncan Petrie, Laurie Ede, Ian Christie and Judith Priestman. Sue Friedrich and Andrea Weiss corresponded with me about their films Damned if You Don't and A Bit of Scarlet, providing useful background information about their particular appropriations of Black Narcissus. Their films were particularly stimulating in demonstrating to me the film's longevity and ability to transcend the customary boundaries of national cinema and generic analysis.

The stills were obtained from the Bibliothèque du Film, Paris and the British Film Institute, London. The University of Bristol's Faculty of Arts Research Fund awarded financial assistance for the purchase of the illustrations. The cover still is reproduced courtesy of Carlton International Media Limited/Lfi. All stills are reproduced here for the purposes of critical analysis.
